

ARTD6156

Exploring the Language of Display

Digital Display - Kilt Me, Baby.

Project by – Sakshi Khadgi

Table of Contents

Title: Visual interpretation of display for Kilts Website 2025 launch. 3
The kilt brand 4
Target Audience Analysis: 5
Core Messaging and Brand Story: 5
Visual Design: 6
Design Theme: 6
Colour Scheme: 6
Typography: 7
Interactive Display for the audience 9
1. Kilts making and transforming: 10
2. Textile Archive Showcase: 11
Metrics and Assessment 16
References 18

Fig 1 Desired colours for the website
Fig 2.1 - Trajan From Adobe Originals.
Fig 2.2 – Avenir Font type from My font
Fig 3 Launching soon page (source- own elaboration)
Fig 4 a Manufacturing of Tartans
Fig-4b Pattern of Kilt making.
Fig 4 c Tartan converting into Kilt
Fig 5 Source- Kinloch Anderson website
Fig 6a Ewan McGregor embracing his Scottish culture
Fig 6b Emma Thompson Promoting the campaign Green Peace.
Fig 7- Source- Own elaboration (coloured image- shane Webber and black and white- very well mind)

Title: Visual interpretation of display for Kilts Website 2025 launch.

Consumers and consumer culture have never valued visuals more (Buschgens et al., 2019). Consumers increasingly communicate visually. Visual communication occurs in daily life, on the streets, and during social gatherings. Instagram allows consumers to frame and interpret their own images (Murray, 2015). These self-presentations require a visual language that is often established informally and used with variable degrees of critical reflexivity and complexity. Not only individuals, but also companies and other organisations are available to a range of platforms, which opens up possibilities for the public to connect with them. My interest in this issue stems from the fact that it has always fascinated me to see how visual communication has surpassed more conventional forms of marketing.

The topic is about a website which promotes significance of kilts and tartans for Scottish culture. In partnership with Robert Gordon University Academics and the Keith Kilt School, this illustrated report outlines a complete plan for presenting a digital display to launch a website that uses digital technology to create a memorable and engaging experience for the target audience. The goal is to produce a big impact and build a distinct presence in the market by integrating the approach of the collaboration with the strategic aspects of the digital display. It also highlights the unique aspects of the project, such as recycling kilts, refashioning them, archiving kilt textiles, and repositioning kilts as fashion. The incorporation of Scottish textile history and the presence of Tartan in textile design further enriches the display. With a focus on the Kilts Website 2025 launch, the report provides insights into the design of the online visual interpretation, video production, display text, and the integration of an Instagram presence. It emphasizes the importance of featuring public figures who are either Scottish themselves or who best represent the global adoption of the kilt. By following this comprehensive plan, the new kilt brand can effectively introduce itself to the market, captivate the target audience, and leave a lasting impression. The digital display will serve as a powerful tool to showcase the brand's unique offerings and create a strong foundation for its future success.

The kilt brand

The kilt brand honours Scottish culture, artistry, and the enduring elegance of kilts. It takes pleasure in producing high-quality kilts with traditional methods and environmentally friendly practises. The brand guarantees authenticity and upholds the history of Scottish textile manufacturing by using wool from Scottish sheep and working with famous textile manufacturer Kinlock Anderson. The brand's dedication to sustainability is one of its unique selling points. It emphasises the need to protect the environment and support a slow, heritage economy. Kilts are recycled, refashioned, and their materials are archived as part of the brand's efforts to ensure the craft has a sustainable future. This commitment to sustainability distinguishes it from competitors in the market and appeals to clients who value moral behaviour. The brand promotes kilts as a trendy option in addition to their traditional heritage. Its designs combine traditional and contemporary interpretations, appealing to people who want to express their uniqueness and create a fashion statement. The brand offers kilts that are both steeped in history and in line with current fashion trends by fusing traditional workmanship with modern aesthetics.

A digital display is essential for grabbing audience attention and creating brand identification in the current digital era. The brand may quickly captivate the audience with its narrative by using visually striking photos, videos, and alluring graphics. The web platform enables a wider audience by interacting with people all over the world who are passionate about Scottish culture, style, and kilts.

Target Audience Analysis:

The majority of this website's target audience will be comprised of middle-aged to older adults, ranging from their mid-20s to their mid-50s, who have a substantial interest in Scottish culture, tradition, and fashion. They place high importance on ecologically friendly business practices and enjoy high-quality items that deftly combine contemporary design with elements of the past. This international audience, in particular in places such as the United Kingdom, the United States of America, Canada, Australia, and Europe, looks to fashion as a means to express not just their individuality but also their cultural identity. They are motivated to do so by the desire to make a positive contribution to the economy of the surrounding areas and to strengthen the links that bind them to their past. They anticipate aesthetically attractive experiences that embody the craftsmanship and tradition of the brand, together with information that is simply comprehended and navigation that is straightforward to use, when it comes to digital displays. The company will be able to design a compelling experience for customers to have on their website if they obtain an insight into the preferences and expectations of their customers.

Core Messaging and Brand Story:

The Scottish heritage, workmanship, and enduring elegance of kilts are all key to the kilt brand's core messaging. The brand emphasises its dedication to conserving ancient methods and sustainable practices to communicate a sense of pride and authenticity.

Visual Design:

Design Theme:

The design theme must be consistent with the identity of the business. It should be able to portray the juxtaposition of modernism and tradition. To generate a feeling of Scottish ancestry, it is possible to make use of elements such as tartan patterns, Scottish landscapes, and traditional symbols. At the same time, layouts that are streamlined and cutting-edge might be utilised to demonstrate the contemporary fashion appeal of the business.

Colour Scheme:

A colour scheme that reflects the brand's heritage and modernity. Consider incorporating colours inspired by Scottish landscapes, such as earthy tones, deep greens, and hints of vibrant hues found in tartan patterns. These colours can be used throughout the website and digital display to create a cohesive and visually pleasing experience.

Fig 1 Desired colours for the website

Typography:

Headlines: For the headlines, Trajan Pro will be used as a font. It is a classic and elegant serif font that is often associated with timeless and sophisticated designs. Its clean lines and historical influences make it suitable for representing the traditional craftsmanship and heritage associated with kilts.

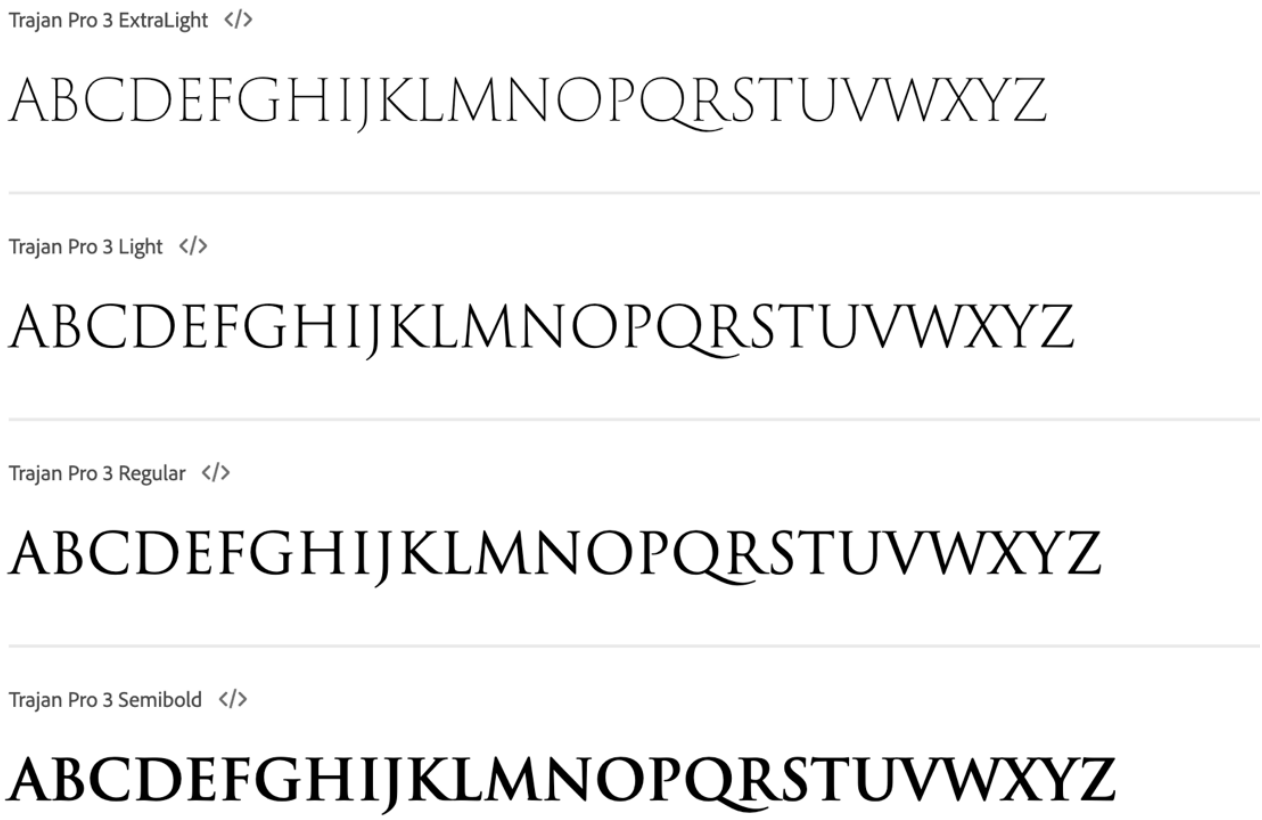

Fig 2.1 - Trajan From Adobe Originals.

Information and Descriptions: Avenir will be used for the text of the website as it is a versatile and modern sans-serif font known for its readability and clean design. It offers a contemporary and professional look while maintaining legibility, making it a good choice for presenting information and creating a user-friendly experience.

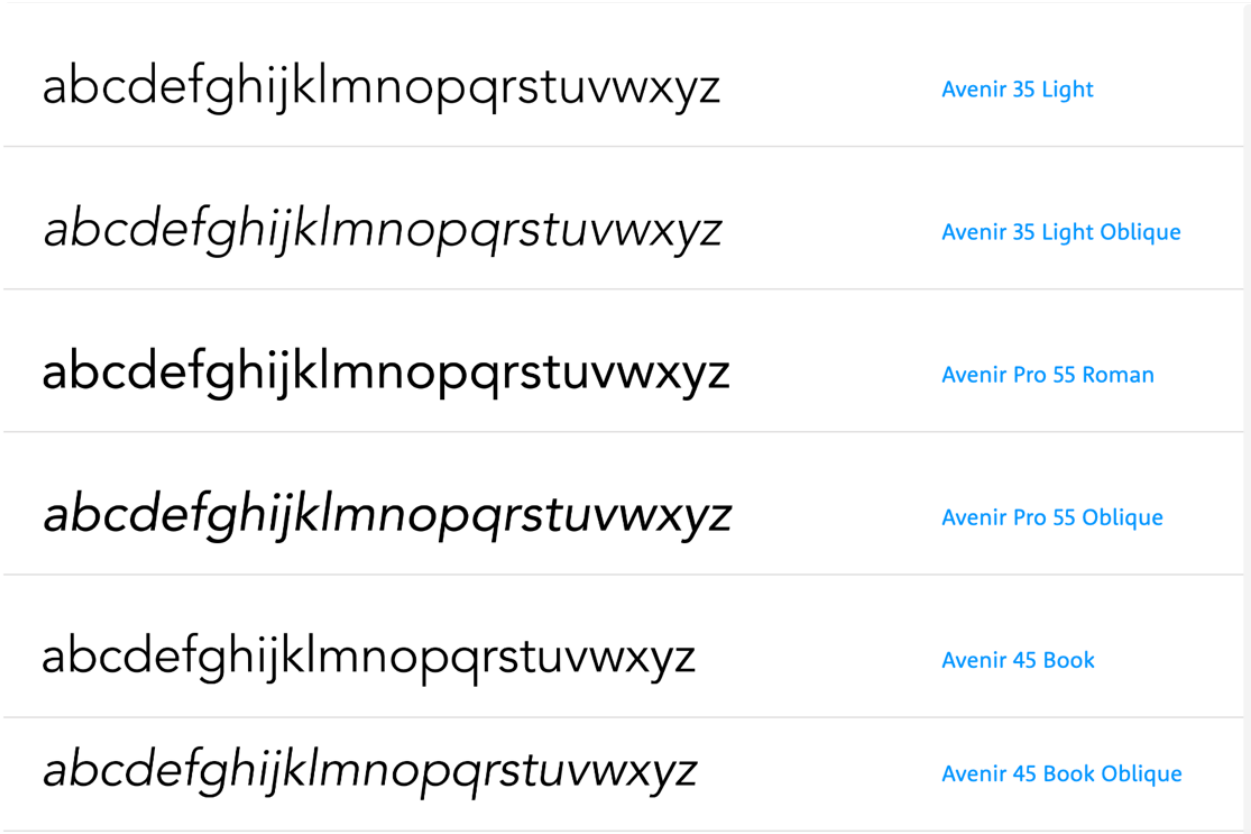

Fig 2.2 – Avenir Font type from My font

Interactive Display for the Audience

Since the brand is launching in 2025, the website will have a day counter which will count backwards till the launch day (Fig 03)

Fig 3 Launching soon page (source- own elabration)

1. Kilts making and transforming:

An interactive Video showcasing the process of manufacturing tartans (Fig) and kilts (Fig-1.1, Fig) which would be the whole process of fibre to fabric.

Fig 4a Manufacturing of Tartans

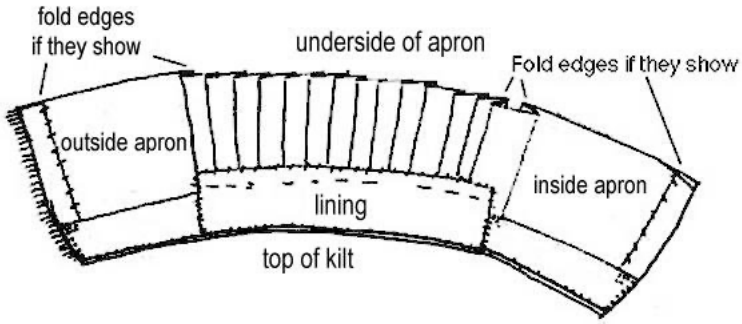

Fig-4b Pattern of Kilt making.

Fig 4 c Tartan converting into Kilt

2. Textile Archive Showcase:

The website will feature an exhibition of archived kilt textiles, sharing their historical significance and demonstrating the evolution of Scottish textile design by Kinlock Anderson and interesting facts about it.

Fig 5 Source- [Kinloch Anderson website]

3. Fashion Show:

A trailer for a runway show where repositioned kilts take centre stage, highlighting their versatility and contemporary appeal, worn by Ewan McGregor and Emma Thompson. Because of his Scottish origin, global reputation, fashion sense, adaptability, and charismatic personality, Ewan McGregor would be a fantastic choice as a brand ambassador for the kilt website. He would also be a great fit for the role. McGregor's endorsement of the brand would increase its profile and appeal with the audience it is intended for because he is a proud representative of Scottish culture. Because of his enormous appeal and his ability to connect with people, he would be able to deliver the message of the brand very successfully and build a favourable association with Scottish kilts.

Fig 6a Ewan McGregor embracing his Scottish culture

Emma Thompson, a famous British actress who is known all over the world, would be a perfect choice for the role of brand ambassador for the Kilt brand. Although she is not of Scottish descent, she is an ideal candidate due to her worldwide reputation, activism, sense of fashion, and respect for Scottish culture. The participation of Emma Thompson has the potential to bring more attention to the brand, attract a larger audience, and promote the brand's ideals of cultural respect, craftsmanship, and sustainability.

Fig 6b Emma Thompson Promoting the campaign Green Peace.

Behind-the-Scenes Footage: Give audiences a unique peek at the project's operations by showcasing behind-the-scenes footage of fashion shows and textile archives. Participation from the audience in the production of an event is very popular. The brand can share insights into how the celebrities have enjoyed their trip together with the brand through videos that take place behind the scenes. As this film is simply a glimpse before the actual trailer is released, the audience will have the opportunity to see the mayhem and the struggle, both of which have the potential to build up their curiosity.

4. Trainee Workshops:

Introducing sign-up for workshops where trainees can learn new skills in kilt production and customization, engaging the audience and providing an opportunity for hands-on experiences. Also introducing the craftsmen and their personal experience with the craft.

5. Instagram Presence:

• Visual Storytelling: Curate an Instagram feed that exhibits the beauty and diversity of recycled and refashioned kilts, as well as excerpts from workshops and design presentations. This is a great way to get people excited about your project.
• Behind-the-Scenes Content: If you want to give your followers an insider's insight into the production process and the people that are involved, share images and videos from behind the scenes.
• Collaborative Posts: To promote the project and raise awareness about the contemporary use of kilts, you might consider working together with fashion influencers, models, and other fashion aficionados. There is also the possibility of working together with a stylist to develop a novel method of utilising tartans and kilts.

6. Advertising / Video Production:

Considering kilts are only worn for important events, the advertisement will focus on the most important day in a man's life: the day he gets married. The idea behind the commercial is to celebrate love in all its forms, Heritage, and Family.

Introduction: This idea emphasises the concepts of love, acceptance, and the passing down of heritage to future generations. The commercial intends to portray the emotional journey that a father-in-law goes through as he welcomes his son's husband into the family while also embracing the custom of wearing kilts. It sheds emphasis on the significance of kilts by highlighting their role as a symbol of heritage, unity, and celebration within a family that is diverse and inclusive.

Title: "From Generation to Union: Kilts, Love, and Acceptance"

Synopsis:

The commercial starts with a welcoming and personal view of a family getting together, which indicates the occasion being shown is a gay wedding. The scene is set with gentle music that is heavy with feeling when the song begins to play. The subject of the camera's attention is the future father-in-law, who appears to be experiencing a range of feelings as he mulls over the marriage of his son and the part, he will play in embracing his son's new spouse.

The First Act: Coming to Terms with Acceptance

The advertisement then shifts to flashback scenes, the theme is white and black which demonstrates the father-in-law's early difficulties in adjusting to the presence of his son's spouse. It shows his internal struggle as well as his coming to terms with the fact that love is not bound by gender. These scenes illustrate his process during these specific objects obtain colours which represent maturing, gaining wisdom, and becoming more accepting nature of the father.

Scene 2: Passing Down Heritage

The action then switches to a critical moment in which the father-in-law, who is dressed in a Scottish kilt, gives the garment to the man who is married to his son. This gesture is meant to represent the transmission of family history while also highlighting the significance of welcoming and respecting new members of the family. It is a sincere gesture that helps bridge the gap between the ages of those involved. The colours of the scene are slowly turning from white and black to coloured.

Scene 3: Celebrating Unity

The commercial features a gay wedding ceremony, during which the groom and his husband proudly wear kilts to celebrate their love and their cultural heritage. The husband's father is prominently featured in the image, beaming with pleasure and happiness as he stands next to his child and son-in-law, which represents his total acceptance and support. The wedding evolves into a meaningful celebration of love, togetherness, and inclusiveness for all those in attendance. This scene has loud and bright colours like shades of red, yellow and green. Red represents love and passion, yellow for happiness and green for growth.

Scene 4: Uniting Families

The final scene portrays a festive reception, where family members from both sides gather, all wearing kilts. It showcases heartfelt interactions, hugs, and laughter, signifying the unity of two families coming together to celebrate love and acceptance. A voiceover emphasizes the significance of kilts in unifying generations and fostering a sense of belonging.
The ad concludes with the website brand logo and a poignant tagline. The call-to-action invites viewers to explore the heritage and significance of kilts, symbolizing acceptance, love, and family connections, and providing links to the website and social media platforms.

Fig 7- Source- Own elaboration (coloured image- shane webber and black and white- very well mind)

Metrics and Assessment

It's critical to establish key performance indicators (KPIs) that are in line with the goals of the new Kilt brand to evaluate the effectiveness of the digital display for that company. Some pertinent KPIs to take into account are:

- Track the number of visitors to the Kilts website, including the number of unique visitors, page views, and session length. Increased traffic is a sign that the audience's interest was successfully captured.
- Interactions on social media: Keep an eye on the brand's social media channels and keep tabs on metrics like likes, shares, comments, and followers. These interactions show that the target audience is involved and interested.

- Conversion rates: Calculate the proportion of website visitors who complete desired actions, such as buying something or subscribing to a newsletter. Conversion rates shed light on how well a digital display performs in achieving desired results.
- User input: Through surveys or user testing, get qualitative user input. This can offer insightful information about user experiences, preferences, and ideas for development.

The digital display for the Kilt brand delivers its key narrative, highlights its distinctive selling qualities, and builds a solid brand identity. The exhibition captivates the audience and completely submerges them in the world of kilts by using an aesthetically pleasing design, providing high-quality graphics, and making strategic use of colour schemes, typography, and visual features. The film for the firm's "brand story" showcases the history, workmanship, and cultural significance of kilts, while also emphasising the business's dedication to modern fashion and the preservation of the environment. The audience will have a greater appreciation for the kilts as a result of the utilisation of appealing imagery and the consistent design theme that is in line with the identity of the business. The digital display, on its whole, produces an experience that is both fascinating and immersive, and it invites visitors to investigate the brand's history, workmanship, and distinctive products and services.

References

History of Tartan and Highland Dress (no date) History of Tartan and Highland Dre... - Kinloch Anderson. Available at: https://www.kinlochanderson.com/highland-dress/history-of-tartan/ (Accessed: 20 May 2023).

(No date) Gay wedding photographer Manchester. Available at: https://shanewebber.com/gay-wedding-photographer-manchester/ (Accessed: 22 May 2023).

The power and symbolism of colors (infographics) (no date) Color Meanings. Available at: https://www.color-meanings.com/#red (Accessed: 22 May 2023).

Buschgens, M., Figueiredo, B. and Rahman, K. (2019), "How brand visual aesthetics foster a transnational imagined community", European Journal of Marketing, Vol. 53 No. 11, doi: 10.1108/EJM-10-2017-0655.

Murray, D. (2015), "Notes to self: the visual culture of selfies in the age of social media", Consumption, Markets and Culture, Vol. 18 No. 6, pp. 490-516.

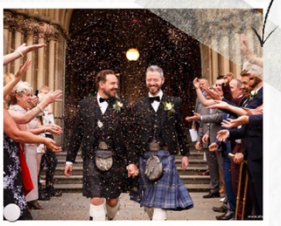

Appendix

Launching
Soon
02
DAYS
10
HOURS
05
MINUTES

earth tones

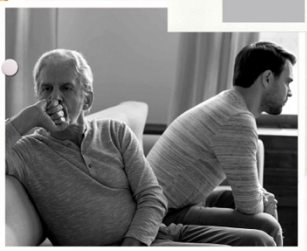

MOOD BOARD

Wedding scene

Flash back

The happy couple