Executive Summary:

Now that sustainability has become essential rather than just trendy, Vave stands poised to transform the fashion landscape with its Autumn Winter 2024 collection. We are an ecologically aware brand, and our launch strategy includes environmental practices, and novel retail and marketing methods so that our customers get fashion and sustainability. We have developed an integrated marketing campaign to affect environmentally conscious consumers by leveraging strong storytelling, collaborating with social media platforms, and always embracing forward-thinking branding. Through the fusion of our operating procedures with our marketing tactics, Vave wishes to increase brand value and forge a new way of thinking about the fashion brand. We expect that this strategic launch not only attracts our target market but also make people change their consumption behaviour to the sustainable alternatives in the entire industry.

Introduction / Background:

Vave started from the base that fashion should be attractive and we do our part in making the world a better place. Our brand is committed to revolutionizing fashion by offering premium, eco-conscious clothing that doesn't compromise on style or ethical standards. The fashion industry is the second largest polluter worldwide, and here we intend to alleviate this by implementing sustainable practices throughout our supply chain from sourcing biodegradable materials, to employing renewable energy in our production processes. Our debut Autumn Winter 2024 collection is going to be launched, with a purposeful focus on a niche consumer segment that is passionate about both appearance and environmental care (Noris, et al., 2021). This report provides a framework to enter the market, and this is done through the utilisation of innovative retail solutions and a launched marketing campaign to create a strong link with our audience. The brand, Vave, aims to achieve more than just responding to the existing need for environmentally friendly fashion. It strives to look into the future and to forecast trends, thus becoming a leader in the sustainable fashion industry (Simmel, et al., 2020).

Mission: Vave is dedicated to redefining fashion by embracing inclusivity and sustainability as foundational pillars, aiming to impact positively on both the environment and society.

Vision:

To be at the forefront of the sustainable fashion industry, setting trends and anticipating future demands to lead as an innovative, eco-conscious brand.

Value:

Vave stands for ethical manufacturing, environmental responsibility, and inclusivity, committing to high-quality, biodegradable materials and renewable energy in our production processes.

Unique Selling Proposition (USP):

Vave differentiates itself through innovative retail and marketing strategies that deeply connect with a specific consumer segment that values both aesthetics and environmental preservation.

Brand Equity

According to Keller's principles in Strategic Brand Management: Building, Measuring, and Managing Brand Equity, Vave's brand equity is cultivated through effective management across key dimensions such as awareness, perception, loyalty, and association. Vave enhances its brand awareness through a blend of digital and traditional marketing, establishing a strong presence in the sustainable and gender-neutral fashion sector. The brand is perceived as innovative and responsible, underscored by its commitment to inclusivity, sustainability, and the use of high-quality materials like TENCEL™ Lyocell. This positive perception builds a loyal customer base among eco-conscious consumers, who value ethical practices and environmental responsibility. Additionally, Vave's associations with luxury, sustainability, and inclusivity resonate deeply with its target audience, reinforcing its position in the luxury sustainable fashion market. Through these strategic efforts, Vave not only meets but exceeds consumer expectations, solidifying its brand equity in a competitive landscape.

Marketing mix

Element	Details
Product	A/W 24 COLLECTION – kintsugi (Broken is beautiful)
Price	Our value to the buyer is high due to our alignment with sustainability and quality values. We employ a premium pricing strategy compared to fast fashion, reflecting the quality and ethical production costs. To foster loyalty, we offer introductory discounts for first-time buyers and rewards for referrals.
Place	We utilize multi-channel retail distribution, including direct sales through our brand website and physical stores in London. We also have pop up stores in Christmas markets and eco-fairs.
Promotion	We focus on online channels, especially social media platforms like Instagram and YouTube. We launch promotions around Earth Day and sustainable fashion weeks, promoting during high social media activity and leveraging user-generated content. Our collaborations include influencers, NGOs, and other brands with similar USPs to enhance our environmental considerations and reach.
People	We have expertise across departments from design to sales. We cherish variety and culture, which is why we hire international interns, employees, and suppliers each season to bring fresh perspectives and teach us new business practices. We also encourage different genders to join our team, fostering an open-minded environment that understands and supports the LGBTQ+ community.

Process	Our buying and sales process is optimized to ensure convenience and efficiency, from search to delivery. To build customer loyalty, we provide exceptional service, personalized engagements, and loyalty rewards. We are committed to sustainable and ethical practices throughout our sourcing and supply chain operations. Additionally, we continuously monitor trends and conduct competitor analysis to strengthen our brand awareness, market share, and reputation.
Physical Evidence	Our packaging and labelling feature distinctive hang tags that reflect our commitment to sustainability and gender-fluid fashion. We draw on the kintsugi concept in our history and storytelling, promoting healing and resilience. Our store and digital presence align with a minimalist and sustainable ethos, using eco-friendly materials and digital displays. Online engagement is seamless, with our website and social media mirroring the physical aesthetics to offer a cohesive e-commerce experience. We ensure transparency and traceability through detailed product passports that provide sourcing and manufacturing information. Evidence of ethical practices is demonstrated through responsible sourcing and production. Active media outreach and engagement help us respond to trends and consumer feedback. Lastly, we gather customer interaction and feedback to adapt our products and services to meet evolving consumer needs.

Consumer Segmentation Profile

Segment	Characteristics	Needs and Preferences	Targeting Strategy
Eco-conscious Professionals	Age: 25-45. Urban dwellers Middle to high income High educational level	High-quality, durable products. Transparency in production. Ethical sourcing and labour practices.	Premium pricing strategy. Emphasis on brand's ethical credentials and sustainability initiatives. Marketing through professional networks and industry events
Trend-sensitive Youths	Age: 18-24 Students or early career Social media savvy Budget-conscious but trend-aware	Affordable options within sustainable fashion Stylish, trendy designs Social media engagement and endorsements	Competitive pricing with focus on value Engaging social media campaigns Collaborations with young influencers and trendsetters.
Lifestyle Aspirants	Age: 30-55 Aspiring for a sustainable lifestyle Looks for luxury and exclusivity Prefers quality over quantity	- Products that offer luxury with sustainability Exclusive, limited-edition items Personalised services and experiences	High-end pricing and exclusive offerings Special membership or loyalty programs Events and experiences that promote luxury sustainable living Vave's consumer segmentation profile has been crafted using the STP (Segmentation, Targeting, Positioning) The STP framework is an essential tool in marketing strategy that allows businesses to define their customer segments, target them with customized offerings, and place the brand in a unique position to stand out from the competition. The STP model gives businesses a chance to be more targeted and customized in their marketing efforts, boosting customer satisfaction, defining brand perception more clearly, and helping them attract their most ideal customers effectively (Hvass, et al., 2022).

Our brand targets three key demographics with distinct strategies. For eco-conscious professionals aged 25-45, we highlight our ethical values and ecological footprint, emphasizing transparency and ethical sourcing. They are engaged through platforms familiar to professionals who prioritize sustainability. Trend-sensitive youths aged 18-24 are engaged through vibrant social media campaigns and collaborations with popular influencers, as they seek trendy, sustainable, and affordable fashion (Hultberg, et al., 2021). Lifestyle aspirants aged 30-55 are targeted with exclusive, premium products that combine luxury with an eco-friendly approach, catering to their desire for exclusivity and personalized experiences (Hultberg, et al., 2021).

Future Consumer 2024 Insights

After analyzing the WGSN report on "Future Consumer 2024" by Carla Buzasi, President & CEO, WGSN, the brand Vave believes these would be important findings for them:

Emerging consumer trends signal a shift towards fluidity in fashion preferences, emphasizing circular textiles and inclusivity. Future shoppers are likely to demand increased sustainability, transparency, and premium experiences without extreme price tags. This evolution is seen in gender-neutral fashion and circular production trends becoming more prominent, which will guide the strategic positioning of brands. As consumers increasingly value ethical sourcing and transparency, brands like Vave must adapt by offering products that not only meet these criteria but also resonate with the evolving expectations of a diverse consumer base, including Sensory-Seeking and Overstimulated Consumers, Future-Shocked and Time-Compressed Consumers, and Tragic Optimists. Each group requires nuanced engagement strategies to align with their distinct desires for simplicity, stability, and meaningful engagement within a sustainable framework. (Carla Buzasi ,WGSN-Future Consumer 2024)

Analytical Framework for Consumer Segmentation

The market can be segmented according to age, gender, income level, and occupation to group different consumer groups with distinct buying behaviours and preferences. Psychographic segmentation of consumers based on lifestyle, values, and interests enables brands to reach those individuals who share the same psychographic profile and are more likely to be responsive to a specific group of messages. Consumers are classified based on their purchase behaviour, usage patterns, and brand loyalty. This enables brands to design and customise marketing strategies, promotional offers and discounts that meet different consumer interests and needs (Thorisdottir, et al., 2019).

Discussion of Retail and Marketing Trends

Current Trends:

1. Omni-channel Integration

Customers demand a comparable shopping experience across both online and offline channels. Therefore, retailers are integrating online and in-store platforms to provide a seamless shopping experience. Industry research shows that 73% of customers prefer shopping through multiple channels. Companies with a solid omnichannel retail strategy retain 89% of their customers compared to 33% for companies with less established omnichannel strategies. (Polson K, 2023)

2. Personalization

Customers generally desire goods and services that are personalized and align with their personal preferences and tastes. Consequently, retailers are leveraging AI and data analytics to tailor their products and services accordingly (Coscieme, et al., 2022).

Future Trends:

- Technological progress regarding sustainable materials like laboratory-made fibres and bio-based textiles will give brands a chance to create greener alternatives to traditional materials, allowing brands to improve their green reputation. (Fransen, B. 2023)

- Even though circular fashion models like rental, resale, and upcycling will step up their game, consumers will tie circularity with waste reduction while making fashion choices (Coscieme, et al., 2022).

- AR and VR technologies will revolutionise the retail industry with the ability of consumers to virtually try clothes on their bodies and imagine products in their settings which is bound to raise engagement levels and reduce the need for many physical stores. (Hamurari.A, 2023)

Strategic Implications:

Through the use of demographic, psychographic, and behavioural data, brands can effectively run campaigns that connect with their targeted consumer segments and as a result, they get higher engagement and conversion rates. Knowing consumer preferences empowers brands to offer customised products that solve the specific needs and desires of segments, which eventually leads to an increase in customer satisfaction and brand loyalty. Integrating online and offline channels allows brands to provide a consistent experience across different devices and touchpoints, which is what today's consumers are seeking, leading to more sales both online and in-store. Through the combination of today and future consumer, retail, and marketing trends, brands can strategically promote, launch, and provide a distinctive consumer experience for Autumn Winter 2024, which will help the fashion industry to grow and succeed in the competitive retail market (Tafesse, 2019)

Offline Retail Strategy:

The Business of Fashion-McKinsey report indicates that retail fashion brands focusing on sustainability or developing sustainable options have the best opportunity to capture new audiences.

Store Location:

Busy urban locations with many environmentally aware shoppers, We plan to open the outlets in these venues that are frequented by our target audience and make them well known.

Eco-Conscious Store Design and Sustainable Environment:

Our stores will embody the eco-consciousness philosophy of our brand, using earth-friendly materials, energy-efficient lighting, and biophilic elements. The space will be spacious and inviting, with products laid out to allow customers to take their time exploring. In addition to sustainable materials, our stores will incorporate environmentally friendly practices such as waste reduction, recycling programs, and energy-efficient heating and cooling systems. We aim to uphold the highest standards of environmental protection and promote green behaviour among both staff and customers.

Online Retail Strategy:

E-commerce Platform:

We will create an easy-to-use e-commerce platform that allows our online buyers to have the best possible shopping experience. The community will be illustrated by detailed product descriptions, images, and information about our sustainable activities. To ensure reliability and security, we will team up with an e-commerce platform provider that has a good reputation and considers sustainability also in its operations (Tafesse, 2019). The design and launch of our website will be worked on with attentiveness to the details and in a way to achieve a flawless and timely release. We will allocate enough time for website creation, testing, and marketing activities, which is going to help us to launch our Autumn Winter 2024 collection.

Social Media Marketing Collaboration

Platform Strategy

We will be targeting audiences from Instagram and Facebook. By starting our content marketing strategy with visually appealing posts, stories and live videos to demonstrate the range of items in the collection and give the audience a behind-the-scenes look. However, on TikTok and YouTube, we will post short but interactive videos that pull out the sustainable context, for example, showing the whole product cycle from material sourcing to the final garment. As for Pinterest, we shall Develop fashion styling and sustainable living boards to be the most inspiring.

Influencer Collaboration

Cooperate with influencers who have become ambassadors in the fashion business and push the fashion industry towards sustainability. Their existing good reputation in that domain is what will make the brand genuine and trusted. Ask influencers to come up with 'day-in-the-life' kinds of content, where they would use pieces from the collection in their everyday activities. Emphasize durability and versatility (Bilińska, et al., 2021).

Brand Story

"Our brand, Vave was founded on the idea of fashion encompassing not only the outside of us but also the inside and surroundings of our planet." Each article is made from ethically sourced materials and is a symbol of our dedication to the environment, which includes water conservation and assistance to local artists. This fall and winter series was created to embody the resilience and beauty found in nature, and it seeks to encourage those who wear it to adopt a style that cares for the planet.

Narratives

- We shall emphasise the usage of material, cuts and use of natural dyes with the range.
- Highlight joint ventures with artisans who have these old techniques in place that help locals and are also good for the environment.

Mantra and Slogan

- Mantra: Embrace Sustainability, Celebrate Diversity, and Create Timeless Beauty.
- Slogan: Fashion that Cares

Vision for the Future

At Vave, our vision is to revolutionize the fashion industry by championing sustainability, inclusivity, and innovation. We aspire to create a world where fashion transcends gender norms, celebrates individuality, and minimizes environmental impact. Through our commitment to ethical practices, cutting-edge designs, and fostering a global community of conscious consumers, we aim to inspire a future where every garment tells a story of resilience, creativity, and positive change. Our ultimate goal is to lead the movement towards a more sustainable and equitable fashion industry, making stylish and responsible choices accessible to all.

Integrated Marketing Communication campaign

To come up with an Integrated Marketing Communication (IMC) campaign and a retail strategy that brings our sustainable fashion brand's equity to the next level, we need to generate a cohesive discourse which will be based on our brand values, mission, and vision, thus leading to the creation of loyal and memorable brands. The heart of the IMC campaign lies in the uniformity of the brand message across all platforms; starting from social media to the physical retail environments. Vave will be closely linked to these principles in the eyes of clients when we speak about all our values, sustainability, quality and so on, in all our communications. This consistency is a key ingredient that leads to trust and reliability being woven into the brand equity, which is an important factor in enhancing brand equity.

Vave should utilise platforms like Instagram, TikTok, and Facebook (which are more visual in nature and short video formats) in such a way that it can relate to the lifestyle of its audience.

By means of meaningful content, interactive posts, and collaborations with influencers (whose lifestyle is sustainable), the brand attracts consumers who not only love the brand but who also share the same values (i.e., sustainability). This involvement creates a solid customer base, having higher chances to recommend the brand and so raise the brand equity. The retail strategy is not limited to selling products exclusively; it is about devising an experience that is in line with the brand's sustainability activities. Such stores may be powered by renewable energy and recycled materials could be used for furnishing, and even offer packaging-free purchases or special offers to customers who bring their own bags. Besides that, these practices are no less than a proof of the brand's adherence to eco-friendly practices and a one-of-a-kind environment that can be the main factor for competitors of this brand. Furthermore, the emphasis on high quality is the type of ethically produced clothing items that will keep the customers happy and also will strengthen the brand identity as a premium and at the same time eco-friendly fashion choice. Customers are likely to appreciate our brand when they get a built to last garment, which is stylish and ethically produced and this can only lead to an improvement of the brand equity. Services like custom fitting, wardrobe consultation and a good return policy will be an addition that will be valued by the customers and hence result in high levels of customer satisfaction and loyalty. These services allow the customer to be at the centre of the buying journey. They increase the positive brand image and reputation through the customer word-of-mouth, which is irreplaceable for the brand's capital.

Through the usage of data analytics which focus on finding out what consumers really want and how they act, more personalised marketing can be accomplished. This is demonstrated by the fact that sending out personalised emails based on previous purchases or the products the customer has looked at online can help customers feel that they are actually understood and appreciated by the brand, which in turn will bring the customer closer to the brand and ultimately increase brand equity. Today, the consumers are more likely to pay attention to environmental issues and buy the brand that not only promises but that totally keeps its words about sustainability. Such a brand has a strong competitive position. This way can be expressed in the form of detailed reports about sustainable materials used, ethical labour practice followed, and also their involvement in environmental projects. This being the case, brand image is not only developed, but it also comes along with a high level of brand equity which is a great contribution to its reputation. Moreover, the company's ongoing endeavour to achieve sustainability through the practices, product offerings, and customer services have kept the brand up-to-date and dynamic. Innovations, such as in product redesign, customer experience or sustainability initiatives, increase the brand's staying power in the media and the customers' engagement level, which puts the brand's reputation and equity in a more favourable position. One of the ways through which we can create a strong marketing and retail framework is by skilfully incorporating the elements we have mentioned into our strategy. It shall give us an advantage in the market and also provides room for growth and development of Vave's reputation. This integrative strategy makes sure that each point of contact with the consumer indicates the brand's values and mission leading to the strengthening of the brand equity (Thorisdottir et al., 2019)

In marketing campaign, every part of the campaign has an important role in elevating the brand recognition and loyalty. Advertising has a great influence in consumers' behaviour; it makes the brand seen and recognized; thus, customers are more likely to be loyal to specific brand (Keller, 2013). Public relations strengthen brand credibility via positive media coverage and also helps to manage and control crises to preserve customer trust as well (Ledingham, 2020). Social media marketing is a tool for building up personal relationships through an interactive dialogue, and for promoting awareness and loyalty, which is done by the means of viral content (Tafesse, 2019). Direct communication via emails, with the personalized messages, keeps the brand in the front of the customers' minds and regular timely updates help the customers recall the brand (Chaffey, 2019). Last but not least, content marketing gives the brand articles and information which help the brand become an expert and build a devoted audience. Through them, the strategy will be able to create a comprehensive plan that will not only raise brand awareness and loyalty but also will definitely strengthen the relationship between the brand and the customers.
